

Orange Street Office Building

Wilmington, Delaware

The historic brick row homes along Orange Street in Wilmington have certainly seen many changes over the years. Now this building has been renovated to adapt to use as office space for a private financial planning cooperative. The design incorporates the tasteful marriage of the historic original brick walls, exposed rough-sawn columns and beams and yellow pine flooring with the ultra modern features such as the exposed ductwork, radius walls, glass and chrome details and translucent acrylic panels. The result is a comfortable, functional workspace that draws its originality from both old and new technologies. The project was completed in May of 2006 and is valued at $1.2 million.
